

Light Railway Construction (Classic Reprint)

The Author, having himself experienced the want of a practical office manual, has endeavoured to provide a text-book which, though primarily intended for those engaged in constructing light railways, may be more or less helpful to all who are employed on public works, whatever may be their nature. He has to express his thanks to Mr. Basil Mott, one of the engineers of the Central London Railway, for his help with the part of the work relating to iron subways; to the Secretary of the Institution of Civil Engineers for the information he has gleaned out of the Minutes of Proceedings; and to Mr. R.A. Eead, of Parliament Street, solicitor, for his assistance in the chapter on the preparation of the plans for deposit.
