

Friends from Afar: Conversations with Dharma Master Cheng Yen

Master Cheng Yen does not differentiate visitors by their social status or occupations. To Master, every person who visits, whether coming from near or far, is an honored guest and a friend who cares about Tzu Chi. These people come from many different fields of professions, including mass communication, religion, medicine, environmental protection, academia, politics, business, and so on. Among these myriad visitors, some are renowned. The purpose of this book is to pass on the wisdom gathered from these conversations between Master Cheng Yen and her visitors and to help readers understand Tzu Chi's mission. This book also strives to convey Master's broad views, which has remained unaffected despite changing times: Always uphold the principles for the Buddha's teachings, for sentient beings, and respect life. Even though she is asked a multitude of questions, Master's ultimate focus is always on training the mind. As Master says, It is better to lead a simple life. The simpler, the better. If a person's mind is directed toward virtue, he will be able to make a difference for himself and build a happy family. When families are healthy, society will be harmonious. To seize the moment and maintain the resolve forever by wisely utilizing life's every instant, and to comfort sentient beings in every dark corner of the world with pure wisdom and love—these are Master's resolutions, faithful path of practice, and unwavering vows of compassion. Master hopes that all of us can come together to develop a field of blessings by diligently cultivating both blessings and wisdom to make our lives fuller and happier!
